Part IV. Reading (noun): The thought process as the learner becomes familiar with a text. Part III. Reading (noun): The literary composition of written text that conveys information to the reader. Part II. Reading (noun): The process of reading a text. Part I. Reading (noun): The process of reading and understanding a written text. Please find below a selection of resources that I have written and developed over the years. I am happy to hear your comments. My Week: A collection of activities to address topics such as focus, summarization, information retrieval, vocabulary, spelling, fluency, handwriting, and so on. The content is appropriate for students in Kindergarten through Grade 5. This resource is suitable for self and collaborative learning. (Sites recommended for grade levels Kindergarten through Grade 5) Reading and Writing Connection: A downloadable collection of the Seven-Step Writing System. The goal is for students to begin writing by reading and inferring from the text. Students are encouraged to interpret, analyze, and summarize, and write a composition. The seven-step writing process encourages writing for deeper purposes. (Sites recommended for grades PreK through Grade 5) Music Curriculum A 82157476af
